After the death of Kate Castleton her manager was inundated with letters of condolence irom ambitious soubrettes, who uncharitable folks might think desired to fill her place in 'The braziler' company. A number of ladies casually mentioned their salaries, and did not torget to ask from $50 to $100 more than they ever received before.

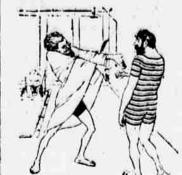

In studying a new part Joseph Holland usually has the assistance of his venerable mother, to whom he repeats his lines. As aiready told in this column, his part in "Setiled Out of Court' is one of remarkable iength. His respected parent happens to be in the country, so the task of hearing his lines will devolve upon the anniable Georgie Drew Barrymere. Mrs. Barrymere remarked characteristically to a friend: "I'm going to be a mother to Joe this Summer."
